UMass fee hike approved

BOSTON. Attending the University of Massachusetts will cost you more next year.

The full UMass Board of Trustees yesterday approved a 7.5 percent student fee increase for the upcoming academic year.

That would increase the average cost for a student by $826 a year. That amount would be less if a student receives financial aid.

Increasing the fee is part of a plan to reduce a $54 million funding gap. METRO

Where's your bus? Wonder no longer

Track your bus with Google app · Boston one of six cities worldwide with real-time data · MBTA GM says trains will soon have same program

The days of impatiently checking your watch and wondering where your bus is are now in the past.

Boston went from "worst to first" yesterday, according to MBTA General Manager Rich Davey, when it became a top pick worldwide to receive a Google pilot program that lets riders essentially stalk their bus.

Davey announced the Hub has launched real-time tracking data using Google Maps that tells the exact arrival times, delays and locations of approaching buses using an online or mobile mapping service.

www.metro.us
STAY WITH METRO ALL DAY. FOLLOW US ONLINE FOR MORE GREAT CONTENT

"Before it only had the scheduled times, but now with real-time data, it lets [riders] know how long a bus will take," said Davey during a press conference at Park Street station.

While the application won't make buses arrive any earlier, or on time, it will ease the frustration of travelers wondering what the hold up is.

Who's getting the app?

Boston, San Diego, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Madrid and Turin will have real-time bus tracking.

Davey said Google chose Boston for the trial run because of the "younger, city demographic" and the recent climb in T ridership.

Martha Welsh, Google's strategic partner development manager, said Boston has been a leader in developing these capabilities.

According to Boston.com, Boston's MBTA was one of the last cities to join Google's list of transit-friendly mapping programs, only after a Facebook group called "Put the MBTA on Google Transit!!!" was formed.

Davey said the T and Google Maps plan on launching similar applications for underground trains and commuter rails, but no date has been set.

Cell-phone video of arrest heard by federal court

What started out as a passer-by using his cell phone to record an arrest on Boston Common has now ended up as an argument before the federal appeals court.

An Allston lawyer is suing Boston Police officers and the city for allegedly violating his First and Fourth Amendment rights.

Lawyers for both sides presented brief oral arguments to a panel of First Circuit judges yesterday.

Simon Glik happened upon an arrest in Boston Common in 2007. When police asked him what he was doing, he said he was recording them.

He was arrested for violating the state's wiretapping law, which requires consent from all persons who will be audio-recorded.

The criminal charges against Glik were later dismissed.

The city and officers are appealing a lower court's denial to dismiss the violation of rights case.

Brief bandwagon

The Citizen Media Law Project at Harvard's Berkman Center for Internet and Society was joined in filing an amicus brief by various media outlets and organizations.

"As applied by police in this case and others, however, the [wiretap] statute has become a tool of suppression rather than protection," the brief said.

Ian Prior, an attorney for the officers and city, said that Glik's argument would have been better suited in a challenge to the constitutionality of the wiretapping statute rather than suing the defendants.

Glik's attorney, David Milton, argued in part for the public interest and First Amendment.

"The public's interest that police are carrying out their duties lawfully on Boston Common is incredibly high," Milton said.

Milton argued that the interpretation would have "staggering implications" for citizens's rights to record in public places.

Awful OPEC talks yield no deal on oil

- 'One of the worst meetings we have ever had'
- Saudi Arabia can't convince cartel to lift production

Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries talks broke down in acrimony yesterday without an agreement to raise output after Saudi Arabia failed to convince the oil cartel to lift production.

"We were unable to reach an agreement — this is one of the worst meetings we have ever had," said Ali al-Naimi, oil minister for Saudi Arabia, OPEC's biggest producer.

The failure to do a deal is a blow for consumer nations hoping the OPEC would take action to stem fuel inflation.

It also underlines concerns about OPEC's willingness to help control prices, perhaps leaving the oil market more open to speculative attack.

Differences

Analysts said that while there were opposing views on whether markets required more crude, the disagreement's backdrop revolved around political tensions in the Middle East and North Africa, as well as differences over how to respond to consumer demands.

GET MORE METRO ONLINE:
WWW.METRO.US

"It is absolutely amazing," said Alirio Parra, Venezuela's former OPEC president. "This is not market leadership."

Brent crude rose $1.06 a barrel to $117.84.

The United States had put pressure on Saudi Arabia to deliver a credible deal to cap crude prices and underpin faltering economic growth.

"We have noted with disappointment that OPEC members today were unable to agree on the need to make more oil available to the market," said the West's energy adviser the International Energy Agency.

Cloud tech may help in fight vs. piracy

WASHINGTON. Services developed by Apple and Google for people to store photos, music and data online may do more to combat online piracy than regulation can, a U.S. official said yesterday.

Victoria Espinel, the coordinator of U.S. intellectual property enforcement, said corporate innovation was often more effective than law enforcement or other rules, which are sometimes applied inappropriately.

"In order for the Internet to be as productive and compelling as possible, we need to have active engagement from companies that interact with and benefit from Internet commerce," she said. REUTERS eBay works on image recognition

LONDON. EBay is hunting for acquisitions to speed up its development of image recognition and augmented reality features as the online retailer and auctioneer seeks to capitalize on the potential of mobile phones to help consumers make impulse purchases.

Image recognition, which Amazon already has, would allow users to photograph an object with their phone, send the image to eBay, find a match in the online store and buy it within seconds — before losing interest. REUTERS

Complaint over site's facial-recognition feature
Privacy problem, group says ◐ It can be disabled

A privacy-rights group said it plans to file a complaint with the U.S. Federal Trade Commission over Facebook's facial-recognition feature for photo-tagging.

The Washington-based Electronic Privacy Information Center is working on the complaint and will file it with the FTC yesterday or today, Marc Rotenberg, the group's executive director, said in an interview. He said other privacy and consumer groups that he declined to identify plan to join the complaint.

Facebook, owner of the world's most popular social-networking service, said on its blog on Tuesday that "Tag Suggestions" are available in most countries after being phased in over several months. The feature uses facial-recognition software and, when a user posts a new photo to their Facebook page, it suggests peoples' names based on pictures in which they have already been tagged.

100M

"We launched Tag Suggestions to help people add tags of their friends in photos; something that's currently done more than 100 million times a day," Facebook said.

The feature also is drawing scrutiny in the European Union, where a group of privacy watchdogs drawn from the EU's 27 nations said it will study photo-tagging for possible rules violations. Ireland's data protection authority also is looking into the feature.

A spokesman for Facebook, Andrew Noyes, declined to comment on the center's plans for the FTC complaint.

The facial-recognition feature is active by default on existing users' accounts, and Palo Alto, Calif.-based Facebook explains on its blog how people can disable the function. BLOOMBERG

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Will all the star sexting ever end?

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Kim Kardashian just can't stand being left out of the sexting party. Lest we forget about Ms. Kardashian while we focus our attention on Rep. Anthony Weiner and Blake Lively, her own cell phone scandal erupted yesterday when In Touch magazine proclaimed that she carried on in a secret texting and phone sex fling with New England Patriots player Bret Lockett while she was dating her now-fiance Kris Humphries. In one text exchange, Kardashian asked if he was ready to be her boyfriend, and he responded, "Are you ready for me?" She replied, "I'm sure I'm ready." Kardashian also asked him to send her a "SEXY picture," to which Lockett replied she should "be patient" because she'd get to see it in the flesh.

▶ Watch where you point that phone, Kim.

Kardashian isn't taking this story too well — she's threatening to sue both Lockett and In Touch magazine. Meanwhile, her reps tell TMZ that she's never met or spoken to him.

A few thoughts: 1. Does everyone in Hollywood send sexy cell phone photos of themselves as courtship? Aren't there enough sexy photos floating around of them already? 2. I'm worried Humphries is going to break up with Kardashian once he reads In Touch, but considering I'm not convinced he's literate, she might get a pass on this one. 3. If they do indeed break up, I call fives on that engagement ring.

Bass syncs-up online

"We are retired — forever." Luckily, Bass, who was out and about on Tuesday night at the opening of Beekman Beer Garden in New York, has plenty to keep him occupied. "I have to go Paris for Men's Fashion Week in a couple weeks," he said when asked what his plans are for the summer. "And then I started this new dot-com this year called FamousYard sale.com. It's where celebrities do virtual yard sales and raise money for their charities." With additional reporting by Meredith Engel

Leo and Blake: Back in the states

After cavorting around France and Italy, Leonardo DiCaprio and Blake Lively have reportedly taken their fledgling romance stateside, sneaking into Disneyland recently, according to Us Weekly. The stars were reportedly escorted into the park close to closing time and were ushered to the front of the line for the newly refurbished "Star Wars"-themed Star Tours ride. Cowell takes the blame

Simon Cowell is taking full responsibility for Cheryl Cole's departure from the U.S. "X Factor" turning into a circus, according to the Sun. "The feeling was that she was slightly out of her comfort zone in America," he explains. "The intention was to do it quietly and say to her she had an option to rejoin the U.K. show. ... BENJAMIN SEROUSSI

Her name is trouble

▶ Keren Ann plays tonight at the Institute of Contemporary Art (100 Northern Ave., Boston). For more info, visit www.icaboston.org.

Keren Ann may be complex and versatile, but '101' is an appropriate introduction

Keren Ann's sixth album is a perfect primer to what the versatile singer/songwriter is all about. The words are packed with tenderness, wit and a sinister sense of humor. The songs are coated in lush arrangements that range from cinematic ballads ("You Were on Fire") to sexy disco ("My Name is Trouble").

Born Keren Ann Zeidel, she has roots in Paris, New York City and Israel. Though this all feels like an introduction course on an artist who is hard to pin down, it is not why she titled her most recent album "101."

"Basically, I love this number," she says. "Aesthetically, it speaks to me. It has a very beautiful physical form. It's also the value of my initials, like how Hebrew letters have a value."

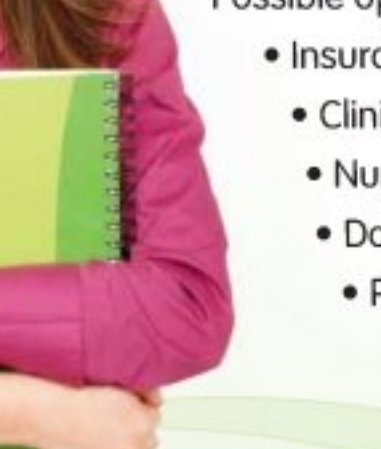
Zeidel also cites 101 as the number to call an ambulance in Israel, something she did a number of times while working on these songs, as her father took ill during this time. The title track of the album is a countdown from 101 to one about that experience.

"Most of the images that came to me were basically in the last hours to my father's death," she says. "He died in my arms, but it's not an album of grief, it's an album of love. I think the closer we got to his death, the closer we got to God."

PAT HEALY
pat.healy@metro.us

Bloody brilliant

There's something wickedly funny about the singer in a sweet bob hairdo holding a gun, gently cooing about killing everybody in her audience on the song "Blood on My Hands."



"I think my strong point will always be melancholy in songwriting," says Zeidel. "But at the same time, I think that I do have in my personality a lot of dark humor in my observation of life, and sometimes I do find myself in certain situations where I like to disconnect completely. 'Blood on My Hands' was one of these."

'An honest tale speeds

If you go

In order to get the maximum enjoyment out of "Richard III" and "The Comedy of Errors," it would be ideal to see them on the same day or as close as possible to one another. Watching the same 14 men perform such divergent roles is both fascinating and exhilarating.

Propeller Theatre Company delivers amazing 'Richard III' at Huntington by combining the Bard with the gore of 'The Texas Chainsaw Massacre'

It's hard to imagine Shakespeare wouldn't be thrilled with Propeller Theatre Company's brilliant production of "Richard III." Like the Bard himself, the acclaimed British theater troupe delivers a perfect blend of intrigue, psychological warfare, spine-tingling vendettas and delightfully dark comedy.

It's impossible not to get a campy, gory thrill out of the violence that befalls anyone who gets in the way of Richard's pursuit of the throne. The stark black-and-white feel of the production gets its only bursts of color from gushing blood, disembowelment and projectile vomiting. One second you're perched on the edge of your seat as the evil, though alluring, Richard plots a brutal killing — the next, you're stifling laughter as it's carried out in inimitable "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" fashion.

The dialogue is flawless and the troupe's attention to detail and to the script is incredible. Gone is the stuffy Elizabethan-style interpretation that has long been de rigueur. Propeller brings the Bard back to a time when both educated and illiterate people were equally entertained. And if they weren't, they threw rotten tomatoes at the actors.

Though "Richard" is one of Shakespeare's longest plays, this captivating production ends far too quickly, though not before Clothier's amazing final scene.

NICK DUSSAULT
nick.dussault@metro.us

Richard as Richard

There won't be any tomatoes thrown at the Huntington Theatre.

Richard Clothier is extraordinary as the hunchbacked sociopath who, despite a distracting leg brace, exudes an appealing air of confidence. Whether he's courting a widow over her husband's corpse, ordering children to be executed or removing the ring from Lady Anne's finger, his piercing gaze and enticing smile reach the rafters and seduce the masses.

best, being plainly told'

MANUEL HARLAN

Clothier is extraordinary as the title character in 'Richard III.'

Propeller Theatre Company also delivers a ridiculous and great 'Comedy of Errors' in repertory with 'Richard' Same dudes, totally different tone

It's not often that Moe, Larry and Curly come to mind when watching Shakespeare, but the Propeller Theatre Company's riotous production of "The Comedy of Errors" is a regular nyuk–nyuk-nyuk fest.

A roving mariachi band awaits you as you enter the Huntington, but they look more like soccer fans lazily vacationing south of the border than an ensemble that's about to deliver the best, bawdiest Shakespearean comedy you may ever see. The musical instruments they're plucking, strumming and drumming quickly become an integral part of everything that's fun about this "Comedy."

Delightful sound effects nearly steal the show, as does a 14-part harmony in the lobby during intermission, but they're just an added bonus that you don't want to miss.

At its core, "Comedy" is a classic tale of mistaken identity that is really just the backdrop for a playful shtick. Sure, there are two sets of twin brothers separated long ago in a shipwreck and yes, their mishaps keep the flimsy plot moving, but pranks abound and chaos reigns supreme as they frolic about, flawlessly executing slapstick with outrageously contagious enthusiasm.

MANUEL HARLAN

Nyuk-nyuk-nyuk

Groin-kick humor, tasteless (but hilarious) nudity and "Benny Hill"-style drag may not seem Shakespearean, but this troupe actually comes closer to capturing the Bard's essence than any highbrow haughty production you'll ever see.

ROCK OF AGES

What has kept Def Leppard together for all these years is a mutual respect for one another, even amidst all the chaos, drama and backstage antics

The groupie-bait version of Def Leppard that was portrayed on VH1's "Behind the Music" a few years ago no longer exists; and according to guitarist Vivian Campbell, that's a good thing.

"One by one we all kind of get married, have children," he says. "A lot of our kids come on the road. It really is a great atmosphere, the whole Def Leppard camp backstage. We've had the same people in our crew for years and years."

He goes on to talk of the spawn of long-term crew members who now work for the British metal band.

"Our tour manager Melvin, his daughter Leslie is our wardrobe person," he says. "We've known Leslie since she was a kid, and now she's in her mid-20s. ... It's a very, very comfortable kind of atmosphere. We foster that, and we always have, because there are so many tours that I've been a part of before I was with Leppard ... where there is so much anxiety and tension and drama."

Campbell, a veteran of such bands as Dio, the reunited Thin Lizzy and Whitesnake, is perfectly comfortable naming names, in terms of both the drama and the debauchery.

"I would say Whitesnake was probably, in terms of girls throwing their panties at the stage, it was definitely more of the Beatlemania than any other band," he says. "And [singer] David Coverdale likes a fair amount of drama too, so there was plenty of that going on backstage."

Campbell joined Leppard in the early '90s after the death of original guitarist Steve Clark. He says that even though there has been drama with this band, it has never been diva-related — and the reason that they've persevered through such historical hardships, including drummer Rick Allen losing his arm in an accident in the mid '80s, is a mutual respect for one another.

"It's kind of an ego-less band," says Campbell. "We take what we do very seriously, but we don't take ourselves very seriously. We realize it's about the songs and about the band, Def Leppard. It's not about any individual."

Live on record

Def Leppard just released a new live album called "Mirror Ball: Live & More" on Tuesday. Campbell says recording it was a breeze.

"The old-school way of doing a live record, you had to get a mobile truck in and there was a lot of pressure and performance anxiety because it was basically one night only. It's like, 'Don't screw up, don't screw up.' So, we never had that pressure, because we totally forgot we were even recording the shows."

Quoted

"In America, when people come to see us, they want to hear 'Pour Some Sugar on Me.' They want to hear 'Rock of Ages.' They want to hear 'Animal.' ... You're kind of ... a prisoner to your hits, which is OK. We're not complaining about that, but it is what it is."

CAMPBELL, ON DOING THE HITS

Top five films

Must-see:

▶ "Super 8"

1 'Super 8' One of the most highly anticipated movies of the summer, J.J. Abrams' latest monster movie is finally out on Friday. It's kind of like "E.T." meets "The Goonies" meets "Cloverfield," which can only be a good thing.

2 'Judy Moody and the NOT Bummer Summer' This summer's "Ramona and Beezus" features a plucky third-grader sent to stay with her wacky aunt Opal (played by Heather Graham) for the summer.

3 'X-Men: First Class' It's the first time in a while that we can feel genuinely psyched for an X-Men movie, and this one definitely brings the goods as it portrays the beginnings of the X-Men clan in the 1960s.

4 'The Hangover Part II' The men of "the wolf pack" are back for another evening of unintentional debauchery, this time in Bangkok.

5 'Kung Fu Panda 2' Martial-arts-performing animals join forces again against an even more insidious enemy. The voices of Jack Black and Angelina Jolie return.

LINDA LABAN
LINDA.LABAN@METRO.US

Liberty Wharf brings two new, quite contrasting additions to the Boston dining scene. One has hundreds of bottles of wine and the other hundreds of bottles of tequila. So they are definitely both welcome additions.

Temazcal Tequila Cantina is urbane — outfitted with iPad menus and sleek pale interesting decor. Del Frisco's Double Eagle Steak House is a southern-slanted steakhouse and seafood joint (part of a chain) with a woody interior and an old-school feel.

At Frisco's, there's no history behind the menu descriptions, no fluffy rhetoric. For instance, the steaks are Midwest corn-fed prime beef (not local, not free-range, not grass-fed). Standards are high from food to service, but so are the prices. Don't miss: The Jumbo Lump Crab Cake ($19) atop a creamy, spicy Cajun lobster sauce that puts aioli-paired ones in the shade.

Temazcal might be named for a Mexican sweat lodge, but there's a steady hand at work with the spicing. The menu is a cross between rustic and boutique, with earthy moles and salsas. Think items like oyster quesadillas, whole calamari stuffed with shrimp and even a roasted, whole baby pig. Don't miss: Guacamole Langosta ($16), a creamy guacamole with lots of lobster meat and a spicy kick.

The similarities are obvious: Both have lots of deck space and huge windows with views over the sterling gray-blue rippling water. Location, location, location.

If you go

Liberty Wharf is the spot that previously housed Jimmy's Harborside for an astounding 85 years and now comprises a dining complex with two familiar Boston names too: Jerry Remy's Sports Bar and Legal Harborside, Legal Sea Foods' flagship (eventually) comprising 20,000 square feet over three floors and a retractable roof.

Obama, FDR and free money

RE: "ON OBAMA AND THE ECONOMY": What Mr. Connell doesn't realize is that all the free money he got from Obama was not free. It had to come from somewhere, and that is why we have such a large debt. So before you go blindly blaming one side of politics — take a look at the other. They are both equally as bad.
RYAN HANDREN, VIA E-MAIL

Kelly Donnoe's letter from yesterday is a classic example of the "post hoc" fallacy, in which because something follows something else, it was assumed to be caused by that something else. She claims that the Great Depression lasted a decade because of "giant intervention by the federal government," but the truth is much more complex. Most people forget that FDR was a fiscal conservative; and most scholars agree that it was his attempt to slash federal spending and reduce taxes, in his second term, that sent the economy into its 1938 tailspin. If war had not intruded, FDR may have tried to return to what worked in his first term. JON MELICK, DORCHESTER

Obama may have inherited a mess; however, his economic policies have made a bad situation worse. Obamacare has already driven up health care costs and prompted many major corporations to drop employee health benefits — because paying the fine for not offering benefits actually saves the company hundreds of millions of dollars. Change we can believe in? Change is all many people have left.
STEPHEN DEBORDE, VIA E-MAIL

Weiner roast continues

RE: "WEINERGATE": Even if (and that is still an if) Rep. Weiner has done nothing illegal, he should resign immediately for the sake of his marriage, his party and his constituents — not because photos of his private parts became public, but because he demonstrated terrible lack of judgement, repeatedly and knowingly lied about it and caused waste of taxpayers' money for both cover-up and ensuing investigation.
GAROLD MINKIN, VIA E-MAIL

I love how the Muslim community is pushing Weiner's wife to stick by him. If she had been the one that was unfaithful, they'd be calling her names and wouldn't blame him if he divorces her. How is it OK to support a liar and a cheat?
JULIE ABAD, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Be careful about taking any foolish risks, because you're not likely to be as lucky as you think in situations that are a bit chancy. Be safe rather than sorry.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Beat the weatherman at his own game by having a backup plan ready in case the elements don't cooperate and you have to change venues.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Plan your logistics carefully by laying out a sensible itinerary. If your agenda doesn't waste valuable time, you won't create unnecessary complications.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Don't expect anybody to pick up your tab, even those who usually do so. In fact, if you're going out with someone who always pays, make it your turn to reciprocate.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Plans involving others should not be changed in order to serve your purposes, especially if it would inconvenience someone else. Be considerate and thoughtful of the needs of others.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. This is not a good day to experiment with unfamiliar tools, materials or ways of doing things. If you honestly don't know how to do something, let the experts handle it.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If you are unduly insistent that everything be done your way, be prepared to take all the complaints as well as any dissention in the ranks.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. It isn't likely that your opposition will defeat you, but there are strong probabilities that you might be tripped up by your own carelessness. Double-check every jot and tittle.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. This is definitely not the right day to engage in endeavors you've never done before — or even try anything risky. Stick to activities that are both fun and safe.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Unfortunately, this is one of those days when things could fizzle, so try not to lay out big money for something you don't need or don't have to do.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. If you don't stand firm on the plans you've made for yourself, you'll allow another to convince you to change directions, which may not be your best course of action.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Circumvent hard feelings at your workplace or home by assigning each person a specific task that you know he or she does best and enjoys doing. Equal distribution is good for morale.

Darling Chloe

Actress, muse and fashion designer Chloe Sevigny takes her resort collection to the runway

Chloe Sevigny isn't one of those celebrities who just slaps her name on a clothing line and lets someone else take it from there.

"Oh it's all me. My name is on it. It's got to pass through me. Every idea is my idea — almost every idea," says Sevigny, who just held her first runway show for the fourth season of her clothing line for Opening Ceremony. "It's not like someone is asking me: 'Do you like this, do you like that?' — and I'm just saying yes or no. I think that's mostly what some bigger celebrity lines entail. Did I just call myself a celebrity?"

Sevigny's promoting her latest film, "Mr. Nice" — a biopic about 1970s international drug smuggler Howard Marks, played by Rhys Ifans. Sevigny plays his long-suffering wife, and she's not shy about admitting that hers isn't exactly a standout part in the film.

"The role wasn't the most exciting role but I liked the project," she says. "I love Rhys and I love the director. It was something I wanted to be a part of."

Most actresses would never deign to admit it when they don't exactly have a role that earns them top billing, but Sevigny isn't concerned.

"They're probably more positive than I and want to set a positive image — and if you project that, then people see you as that," she says. "Where maybe, I'm not as afraid of that."

Sevigny's daring side seems to come out strongest in her fashion line. For her insights about her latest resort collection, visit www.metro.us

▶ The Bruins celebrate a second-period goal last night.

Bruins pound Canucks in another Boston massacre
B's avenging Horton with class, not cheap shots

In the end last night, it didn't matter if Nathan Horton, Rich Peverley or Horton the Elephant was playing on the Bruins' first line.

They were on a mission to find the back of the net.

And they did.

The high-flying trio of David Krejci, Milan Lucic and Peverley accounted for a pair of goals as the B's routed the Canucks 4-0, tying the Stanley Cup finals at 2-all.

The pivotal Game 5 is Friday night in Vancouver (8 p.m., NBC, 98.5 FM).

Boston's suddenly dynamic offense has scored 12 goals since Horton suffered a severe concussion on a dirty hit by Vancouver defenseman Aaron Rome early in Game 3.

Peverley opened things last night, beating Roberto Luongo through the five-hole from close range midway through the first period.

Michael Ryder sent a pretty wrister over the Canucks goalie's left shoulder in the second period, and Brad Marchand beat Luongo with a backhand two minutes later.

The last straw for the backstop came 3:39 into the third, when Lucic sent a pass into the crease. The puck ended up in the back of the net, apparently off Peverley.

Former BC standout Cory Schneider replaced Luongo. METRO

Playing up a man down

The post-Nathan Horton era began in earnest for the Bruins last night in Game 4 of the Stanley Cup finals at the Garden.

The loss of their second-leading postseason scorer figured to be tough to overcome, but if the B's have excelled at anything against the Canucks, it's playing a man down.

Vancouver's power play was one of its most lethal weapons through the first three rounds of the playoffs, converting at a 28.3 percent clip.

But it's come up small against the Bruins. The Canucks entered last night's game scoring at a 6.2 percent clip on the man advantage, and failed to score on any of its six chances in Game 4.

An active Boston PK and Tim Thomas seemed equally responsible for Vancouver's troubles. METRO

NHL in brief

Tougher rules on head hits

BOSTON. The NHL's Rule 48, outlawing certain hits to the head, will be expanded starting next season.

The league's GMs, along with a panel of former players, decided yesterday to remove the word "blindside" from the rule, giving referees more leeway. METRO

Pretty flippin' good

◗ Ortiz smashes another homer in the first inning for the Red Sox ◗ He's owning Yankees pitching this year

A day after infuriating the Yankees — and the New York tabloids — with his post-homer bat flip, David Ortiz was at it again last night.

The Red Sox slugger crushed a 3-2 offering from A.J. Burnett into the right-field stands last night, spotting Boston a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Posing after home runs or not, Ortiz is on fire these days. He entered last night's contest in the Bronx hitting .324 with 14 home runs, 32 RBIs and 35 runs scored on the season.

He's batted safely in eight consecutive games, with extra-base hits in all but one — the streak opener on May 30 against the White Sox.

"David's a big boy. He can take care of himself."
